

French Fashion Makers Respond to Country's Call

A new phase of life is appearing in Paris. The men have gone to war but instead of abandoning their business they have left them in charge of the women. The great dressmaking establishments are many of them being handed over to some trusted member of the family and it is to be hoped that they will continue sending us new ideas until the men return, and prove the worth of women in emergencies.

Poirot was one of the first to respond to the call of arms and close in his wake went Jouda, the head of the house of Bernard, Worth, Bechoff and Doucet. The Callot sisters are keeping their staff busy no longer entirely upon new creations but upon hospital supplies.

As Americans would probably be the greatest buyers, if not the only ones, during this period of war, the dressmakers in Paris quickly changed their models to suit the American trade.

A Basque Dress of Dark Taupe Broadcloth and Black Satin.

The skirts, though wider are not as voluminous as a few years ago. They are cut circular and fit closely about the hips, flaring at the ankles. They are very short, at least five or six inches from the floor. Some of the new tunics are cut with a deep point front and back. This is a very becoming length for the woman who is seeking to accentuate her height.

The Moyen Age frock is having a tremendous vogue. Many of the autumn models hang straight from the shoulder to the hem with out a visible waistline. Some have a broad flat belt, and others have sashes which tie in a pinafore bow at the back.

The redingote effect is given many of the long-waisted frocks. One dress of dark taupe broadcloth is here illustrated. The waist is of the short-basque variety, with plain short sleeves. A tunic, which does not meet in the front, is worn over a black satin skirt. The girle is of the same material as the dress, and tunic, and meets in the back where it is fastened with snappers placed underneath the cloth-covered buttons. Apointed collar and pointed cuffs of the satin complete the dress.

This is indeed a lace season and for evening dresses and for afternoon dresses it is used extensively. It forms overdresses for frocks of charmeuse and satin; at times it is only the tunic, or it may be but the bodice of a dress. The margot edged craquele net is very smart and effective. The evening gown illustrated has a surplice bodice of this craquele net with the margot edge, and a craquele net yoke. The skirt is of pink satin with overskirt of lace. Around the waist is worn a wide sash of silver gauze ribbon which ties at a low waistline in the back.

The practical evening wrap of black velvet which is worn with this costume is called the Monna Vanna cape after the play written by Materlinck. The collar is of Persian lamb and the cape is lined throughout with a rich Nattier blue satin. The lining of capes and wraps this year is an important feature of the garment. Wonderful brocades, figured crepe de Chine, moire, and taffeta are all used.

For evening capes and wraps there are exquisite metal brocades from sixteen dollars a yard up, which are both effective and beautiful. These are trimmed with collars of ermine, mink, sable, beaver or kolinsky, the latter is a northern Russian or Siberian mink. Among other materials used for these wraps are Ottoman faille silk which comes in rich designs futuristic in their colorings and outline. One stunning coat made of this silk had an allover figure that at a distance reminded one of the Chinese designs, and the effect was heightened by the shape of the cape which was not unlike a Chinese lantern. It was trimmed with a huge cape of kolinsky and a band of the same fur banded the cape just above the hem. This cape was lined with a plain green, which matched one of the colors in the design.

An Evening Gown of Margot Lace And Cape of Black Broadcloth.

The separate tailored coat is made of such warm and thick materials as velour de laine, cheviot and a new fabric called chenille cloth. Velvet and plush are also used.

The trimming of street suits of faille ribbed velour, serge, garbardine, velveteen, corduroy, chiffon velvet, poplin duvetyne, "kitten ear", or broadcloth, is confined almost entirely to the collar, cuffs or waistcoat effects. These may be heavily braided with Hercules braid or trimmed with one of the superb metal vestings; these are very expensive but a small amount goes a great way. Chiffon velvet in a Roman stripe is popular and may be had in blue and tan or in tan and brown. Caracul velvet and moire chiffon velvet are often used to good advantage. Various Scotch plaid effects are also used for the collar, cuffs, and waistcoat and are very smart. Combinations of materials are seen in these suits such as velvet and fur cloth, velvet and faille silk, blue serge and black satin, and satin and broadcloth.

An ultra touch in the season's frocks whether it be the street suit, the afternoon or the evening dress, is to have a flower, often a rose, of a becoming color tucked into the sash at the waist, or placed coquettishly at the neck. Garlands are placed under chiffon and lace on skirt and waist.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
